Patricia Bazrod Elected as New CEIA President

Congratulations go to Patricia Bazrod, Director of the Undergraduate GT Internship Program, who has been elected president of the Cooperative Education and Internship Association for 2014-2015. Mrs. Bazrod has served as the Director in the former DOPP and now newly combined Center for Career Discovery and Development for seven years. In her role, she has served students, employers and the campus community by successfully expanding the services the GT Internship Program provides to all constituents. She has been an advocate of experiential learning and a leader in the field for 29 years.

The Cooperative Education & Internship Association (CEIA), the leader in work-integrated learning, is a professional and productive organization serving students, educational institutions, employing organizations, and governmental agencies. CEIA believes that students, employers, educational institutions and communities benefit from effective work-integrated learning programs and that education can be enhanced through application in a structured work environment and that work provides an environment for continuous learning.

Congratulations to Team Sanivation for their Inventure Prize Win

Team Sanivation invented the Safi Choo Toilet T a safe, cleaner way of using a toilet to replace the pit latrines often found in the developing world and refugee camps.

The team includes: Brandie Banner, Jasmine Burton and Erin Cobb. The all-female, multidisciplinary and multicultural team won First Place and the People’s Choice Award, including $25,000 in prize money, plus patent, legal and start-up advice.
15 Job Search Tips for College Seniors

If you're a college senior who's expecting to graduate soon, you're probably thinking about how you're going to make the transition from student to self-supporting worker. Even under the best circumstances, this process is extremely challenging for most college seniors. But, with the right preparation, it's possible to bridge the gap from college to career.

Based on over 25 years of experience as a college career services director, here are my top 15 job search tips for college seniors:

- Attend any alumni networking events on campus or in locations where you would like to work. Consult your college's alumni office and regional alumni clubs as well as your career office to uncover possibilities.

15 Job Search Tips for College Seniors

How To Verbally 'Package' Yourself For An Interviewer

Your well-crafted resume and cover letter have gotten you to the interview. Now, it's up to you to highlight, illustrate, draw attention to all your skills and capabilities. Many job interviewees make the mistake of thinking the facts on paper will make the point about expertise, and the interviewer will recall them, but those facts are not enough. You need to verbalize what you offer. State explicitly what you bring by thinking of a detailed 'elevator pitch.'

Your package phrasing should consist of the following:

"I will have a degree in --- by (date), with a GPA of (use only if over 3.0)"
"I have skills in ---"
"I am experienced with ---"
"I am capable of ---"
"I have exhibited excellence in ---"
"I have been exposed to ---"
"I have knowledge about ---"
"I am equipped to help you with (state a project or task in which you know the company/position will be involved)"
"I can provide you with --- because ---" This statement is particularly powerful because of the use of the words 'you' and 'because.'

Obviously, you won't make this entire package of assertions all at once. You'll want to remind the interviewer selectively of these powerful facts throughout the session. Also, once you make these 'I am' statements, you'll want to back them up by supplying details about classes, experience, or projects. And use this arsenal to compose a final listing at or near the end of the interview, as a sort of summation.

Create a list from the suggestions above, set it to memory, and drop these phrases during the interview to hammer home your entire 'package.'
